A Study of the Categories of the Zhao-Series Initials of Middle Chinese from the Perspective of the Northern Dialects

By

Zhang Xuelan

A Thesis Submitted to
The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology
In Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for The Degree of Master of Philosophy
In Humanities

January 2002, Hong Kong

ABSTRACT

The present study aims at investigating the categories of the zhao-series initials of Middle Chinese. Particularly, the present study tries to examine whether the zhuang-group initials and the zhang-group initials should be considered belonging to one or two groups of initials, using both dialectal and historical data. The first part of the thesis is an overview on what is being said about the zhuang-group initials and the zhang-group initials in previous studies. The second part of the thesis discusses the merge and the split of the zhuang-group initials and the zhang-group initials based on their historical development and in conjunction with ancient Chinese and Modern Chinese Phonology. The third part of the thesis uses the data of the distribution of the zhuang-group initials and the zhang-group initials in present day Northern Mandarin.
to discuss the categories of these two groups of initials in Middle Chinese. Combining the observations made from both dialectal data and historical studies, the conclusion of the present study is that the zhuang-group initials and the zhang-group initials should be considered belonging to two different groups of initials, which will be the fourth part of the thesis.